Massive storm dumps inches of sleet and snow, but Lincoln dodges icy bullet

STANFORD — A heavily anticipated winter storm dumped inches of sleet and snow on Lincoln County Sunday and Monday, creating snow drifts that made travel across much of the county impossible for normal traffic.

But freezing rain didn't make as much of an appearance during the storm as originally expected, and Lincoln, along with much of Kentucky, didn't see the widespread power outages officials feared could have occurred with heavy amounts of icing.

Lincoln County experienced a single brief power outage Sunday night, after a power line went down along Ky. 501 in the Kings Mountain area.

The line was repaired quickly and the county hasn't had to deal with any other issues more serious than a few vehicles driving off the road, Emergency Management Director Don Gilliam said.

Emergency responders from multiple agencies gathered at the Lincoln County Emergency Operations Center in Stanford Sunday night in preparation for possible disaster response. But the night proved to be a quiet one, with only one incident of note — a semi-truck going off the road into a guard rail along U.S. 27.

Lincoln County government offices and schools were closed Monday. Schools were also closed

Local officers rally behind deputy clerk diagnosed with cancer

STANFORD — A Lincoln Sheriff's office deputy clerk loved by many in the local law enforcement community has been diagnosed with inoperable cancer.

But the deputies, troopers and police officers who know Donna Sheron aren't leaving her to fight alone.

A large number of area law enforcement officers — at least 10-15 at last count — are going to have their heads shaved as a fundraiser for Sheron this Saturday.

"She has to lose her hair, but she's not going to lose her hair by herself," Lincoln County Sheriff Curt Folger said.

Sheron was diagnosed with cancer in multiple locations in her body in mid-February. At least one of the cancers is inoperable, "but hopefully can be treated with chemotherapy," Folger said.

Sheron has still been coming in to work at the sheriff's office in downtown Stanford every day, before leaving in the afternoons to undergo chemotherapy and radiation treatments, Folger said.

"She just loves the guys and loves the sheriff's office," he said. "She's like a mother to a lot of us, and a special friend to us also. Just

'Mischievous person' blamed for large oil spill along Ky. 698

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

STANFORD — Emergency crews were scrambling the afternoon of Feb. 26, trying to contain a large oil spill that happened along Ky. 698 near Greasy Ridge Road in Lincoln County.

Lincoln County Emergency Management Director Don Gilliam said the owner of a truck that spilled the oil, Ben Scott, said "some mischievous person" opened the valve on a hose connected to his tanker truck, which was filled with crude oil, allowing the oil to spill onto the ground and run into a nearby creek.

The creek runs quickly into the Green River, where hazmat crews from Stanford Fire Department attempted to block some of the spilled oil with absorbent booms. Firefighters with Lincoln County stations 4 and 8 assisted on the scene.

Hundreds of gallons of oil spilled near the Green River after someone opened a valve on a tanker truck, causing oil to leak into a creek. STANFORD — A semi-truck ran off the road in Stanford and struck a utility pole along U.S. 150 the morning of Feb. 26, cutting power to multiple homes and businesses and temporarily shutting down traffic signals along U.S. 27.

The driver of the truck was uninjured in the one-vehicle wreck, but it took dozens of emergency responders hours to handle a ruptured fuel tank on the truck, remove the truck and trailer from the ditch and clear the scene.

The driver wrecked when bright sunlight blinded him, Stanford Police Sgt. T.J. Hill said. The truck ran off the right shoulder of eastbound U.S. 150, through a guard rail and into a ditch near Spring

Highland United Methodist Church news

Even though on Sunday, March 2, there were reports of bad weather forecasts, the Highland United Methodist Church had a good attendance for worship. However, there were some regular attendees absent.

Charles (Buddy) Young was our birthday person for the week.

The Scilley's want to thank Buddy and Frankie Young for helping clean and decorate the church for March.

There were a couple unspoken prayer requests, and the names of Bob Gourley and Marissa King were added to our prayer request list. Marissa gave birth to twins, Ava and Chevy. The twins are grandchildren of Rickie and Tammy (Young) King. This is the second set of twins in the Buddy Young family. They are his great grandchildren.

Sunday's message was based on Scripture from Hebrews 12:1-4. The emphasis was on being determined in our Christian walk by not letting self or the world distract us from being true followers of Christ.

After worship the choir had a short practice for learning some new Palm Sunday and Easter music.

Next Sunday there will be choir practice after worship.

Next Sunday the children will recite their Bible verse as a part of the first Sunday of Lenten worship.

Ash Wednesday services will be held at 7 p.m., Wednesday, March 5.

Anyone is welcome to worship with the Highland United Methodist congregation at 10 and 11 a.m. and at any other services that we may conduct.

Each Sunday after worship and activities, we have fellowship time which usually includes an unplanned meal. Join us!

Waynesburg Family Worship Center news

By Aline Matlock

Family Worship Center was blessed Sunday with songs of praise and worship. Just like every Sunday, the weather tried to hinder some from coming, but those that came were truly blessed. We are truly thankful for those that give their time and talents to bring joy to that part of the service.

The food pantry is open to those that are in need. We are in need of items for the pantry such as canned goods, pasta, pancake mix, boxed potato mixes and smack foods.

Our prayer list has the Martin family needing our prayers, other that have cancer, heart problems, and many other kinds of problems. Jesus is our healer and He does hear our prayers. If you would like for us to pray for you, call Vickie Dowell at (606) 879-6037 and the prayer team will take them to God in prayer. If you are needing God to be in your life, call our pastor, Bro. Steve Gates at (606) 379-5213 and He will help in that area. The church is here to help people spiritually and salvation in their souls.

Bro. Gates' sermon on Sunday was speaking about Elijah found in 1 Kings 1:9. Elijah was a great man of God, but he let a woman named Jezebel intimidate Him, so that he began to fear, got discouraged, depressed, hid under a bush and forgot to rely on God to help him. Satan caused this spirit to come upon him and because of this, he could not perform his calling that included calling fire from Heaven causing Israel to repent and declare the rain is coming, what incredible power Elijah had.

Don't let satan or anyone else intimidate you in your walk with God. We are unable to do our work for the Lord when someone tries to intimidate us.

Here are some ways to overcome this: make sure our heart is clean, check your motives - are they pure? Identify the spirit when it is there, be bold in the Lord.

We are living in the day when many are deceived, listening to all kinds of doctrine, mistaking wrong for right, being swayed by false teachers, listening to others that are carried about with all kinds of religion instead of trusting in what God's word tells us to do and believe.

We are living in a day the ear does not hear, and the eye does not see, but when we read and hear God's Word spoken with truth, our eyes will become open like the Apostle Paul's when the scales fell from his eyes and he began to see things differently and so will you. God bless all of you that read our church news.

News from Pleasant View Baptist

By Scena Ann Petrey

It may have been a rainy, dreary day outside, but inside Pleasant View on Sunday, March 2, the Spirit of God shone brightly. The music was awesome, and the sermon was moving.

Bro. Kyle's message was taken from Exodus 33:7-17. He began by mentioning a picture that we all take for granted. Have you ever noticed the picture of Jesus knocking on the door for admittance? If you have, you have seen that the door knob in not on the outside of the door. Jesus knocks and allows us to open the door to let Him in. Jesus give us the choice of allowing Him into our hearts and lives. The choice is ours!

So is it with the church. We (the church) have to allow Jesus in - He will not force His way in the church building! All of us want special access to God. Jesus provided that access for us by His death on the cross, burial in a borrowed tomb, and resurrection.

In the passage from Exodus, Moses was the intercessor between the Israelites and God. Because of the Israelites' worship of a golden calf, God decided that even though He would allow them to go into the Promised Land, He would not go with them. Moses began pleading the Israelites' case.

Jesus is our intercessor between us and God. We pray to Him. Prayers will be answered, but in God's time and will. Many times we have to be careful what we pray for; God may give us just what we request. Only God knows what is best for each of us.

Following the early service, Caden Bastin made a public profession of Jesus. He is the son of Melanie and Nick Bastin and the grandson of Mike Bastin.

Congratulations to the Lincoln County Boys' basketball team. They won the 45th District last Friday night by defeating Boyle Co. Members of the team from Pleasant View include Andrew Wilkes, Dalton Godbey and Noah Young. Congratulations to Andrew Wilkes for making the all-tournament team.

Preparations and practices are under for the Youth Bible Drill for 7th graders. Contact Bridgett Blakeman if you are interested. Practices are set for every Sunday from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Save your Campbell's soup labels and General Mills box tops for the WMU-Christ Followers. They will use these to support the Oneida Baptist Institute. Contact Annette Story for more information.

Don't forget that Vacation Bible School 2014 is set for June 16-20, 2014.

On March 11 and March 25 at 6:30-7:30 p.m. we will provide training to learn more about one-to-one discipleship. Please let Bro. Kyle or Bro. Matthew know if you plan to attend.

A $25 deposit is due by March 16 for Crossing Kids' Camp. You can contact Stacy Story for more details.

Find out more about the Bucket Project - Hospice Care Items to Go! Contact any member of the Christ Followers group.

Another date to save is April 12, 2014. The Broughtontown Community Center will host a fund raiser for cancer patients. All proceeds will be placed in the Eddie Hopkins Foundation Fund. Gospel singing, a meal for a nominal price, and an auction will be features for the night. The public is invited to attend; there is no charge, but donations are appreciated. Contact Loren Simpson for more information.

Man indicted for trafficking, resisting arrest

A Stanford man accused of drug possession, fleeing from police and resisting arrest was indicted by a Lincoln County grand jury on Feb. 28.

Curtis Cook, 37, of 105 Adams Court in Stanford was indicted for first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance, first-degree fleeing or evading police, having no brake lights and resisting arrest.

Cook was arrested Dec. 3 by Stanford police, when he allegedly fled from his vehicle after being pulled over for failure to use a turn signal and having no brake lights.

After catching up to Cook, officers had to use a Taser to subdue him because he was resisting arrest, according to information from police.

Methamphetamine was found in Cook's possession during the incident, according to police. Cook's indictment alleges he possessed less than 2 grams of meth "with the intent to distribute, sell or transfer."

Stanford Police Officer Travis Richardson, one of the two who pursued and arrested Cook, testified against Cook for the grand jury. An arraignment in the case has been scheduled for 10 a.m. March 14.

The February Lincoln County grand jury also indicted five other people:

- Haley D. Stevens, 22, of 607 Miller St. in Stanford was indicted on one count of welfare fraud for allegedly failing to disclose factors that affected her eligibility for more than $100 in benefits she received between October 2012 and June 2013. Bradley Reid with the Office of the Inspector General testified against Stevens. An arraignment was scheduled for 10 a.m. March 28.

- Charles L. Hale, 30, of 197 Lincoln Trail in Stanford was indicted on one count of theft by unlawful taking for allegedly taking property belonging to Dan Grigson worth $500 or more on Jan. 17. Stanford Police Officer Barry Allen testified against Hale. An arraignment was scheduled for 10 a.m. March 28.

- Deedra Shipp, 24, of 304-B Church St. in Stanford was indicted for third-degree burglary, theft by unlawful taking and being a persistent felony offender for allegedly taking less than $500 worth of property belonging to Walmart on Dec. 22 after having been banned from entering the store. Richardson testified against Shipp. An arraignment was scheduled for 10 a.m. March 14.

- Brian K. Shelton, 42, of 7995 Ky. 1247 in Stanford was indicted on one count of receiving stolen property for allegedly having in his possession on Sept. 7, 2012, a diesel stump grinder worth more than $10,000 that he knew belonged to Daniel J. Berry. Lincoln County Sheriff Curt Folger testified against Shelton. An arraignment was scheduled for 10 a.m. March 28.

- Bryan T. Rice, 49, of 490 Ky. 590 in Stanford was indicted on one count of first-degree bail jumping for allegedly failing to appear on a felony charge in Lincoln County Circuit Court after being released from custody on the condition he appear at a specified date and time. The Lincoln County Circuit Court Clerk testified against Rice. An arraignment has been scheduled for 10 a.m. March 14.

Valley Drive at about 8:45 a.m.

Stanford firefighters responded with the city's hazmat unit and cleaned up some spilled fuel from one of the truck's gas tanks, which had ruptured in the wreck.

A state hazmat team from Somerset was called to the scene and pumped 80 gallons of fuel out of the truck's tanks, said Don Gilliam, Lincoln County's emergency management director.

Initial reports estimated that as much as 400 gallons of fuel was at risk for spilling from the truck, causing a state Environmental Response Team to show up at the scene, Gilliam said.

Gilliam estimated that less than 10 gallons spilled in the end.

A pair of heavy-duty tow trucks had to drive in from Lexington to lift the trailer and cab separately out of the ditch and back onto the roadway. That job was completed by about 2 p.m.

Kentucky Utilities workers were able to restore power shortly after 9 a.m., bringing the downed traffic signals back online. Linemen were still on the scene after 2 p.m., repairing lines on the pole struck by the truck.

Hill said the truck was from B&F Trucking out of Bardstown and was headed to London.

with oil by 4 p.m. but oil could still be seen flowing in the water downstream.

Firefighters also found oil flowing further downstream in the Green River, near Rube Brown Road.

Gilliam said "conservative" estimates are that 700-1,000 gallons of oil spilled. Responders don't know exactly when the oil began spilling. Neighbors near where the truck was parked reported smelling the oil at about 3:30 p.m., Gilliam said. Scott told investigators he had checked on his tanker truck the previous day and it hadn't been leaking then.

Crews used backhoes to dam the creek near the initial spill site and prevent any more of the oil from reaching the Green River. Cleanup vehicles from an environmental company, Perdue Environmental Contracting Co. (PECCO), began arriving at the scene around 5 p.m.

PECCO crews vacuumed up the contaminated water and dug up and removed all the contaminated soil.

At top, firefighters watch for flecks of oil in the Green River Feb. 26 after placing an absorbent boom, seen in the distance, in an attempt to prevent the oil from flowing too far down stream. a very caring person."

Sheron, who has a husband, two adult children and grandchildren, has been a deputy clerk under Folger for more than seven years.

During that time, she's developed strong relationships with many officers, not just in the Lincoln Sheriff Department, but in the Stanford Police Department, Kentucky State Police and elsewhere, Folger said.

At least one Boyle County deputy sheriff is among those who plan to lose their hair for Sheron March 8.

Folger, a former barber, is planning to have his head shaved and said he may take a turn handling the razor for others as well.

The event isn't limited to law enforcement officers — Folger said anyone, male or female, who wants to show their support for Sheron is welcome to attend and receive a head-shaving, too.

Donations are being accepted by the sheriff's office and will be put toward Sheron's medical bills.

Folger encouraged people who want to donate to stop by the Lincoln County Sheriff's office in downtown Stanford or call the office at (606) 365-2696.

The head-shaving event will be held at 12 p.m. March 8 at the Lincoln County Sheriff's office.

An encouraging word

A time for change

By Howard Coop

Lent, a special season for Christians, began on Wednesday, March 5, a day that has come to be known as Ash Wednesday. It is that period of forty days not counting Sundays that precedes Easter.

For centuries, Christians have observed the season of Lent. At the time of Irenaeus, who served as bishop of Lyons in the later part of the second century A.D., a fast before Easer was very short. Many Christians ate nothing between noon on Good Friday and Easter morning. One of the earlier references to the Lenten fast, or Quadragesima, dates back to 325 A.D. where it is mentioned in the fifth canon of the Council of Nicaea.

In that early period, Lent was a short time of fasting in preparation for Easter. As the years passed, it became a longer time of self-discipline when some Christians practice self-denial and give up certain foods or other desirable things during that specific period to prepare for Easter. Across the years, the traditional purpose of Lent has been to prepare “the believer through prayer, penance, repentance, almsgiving, and self-denial” for Easter.

Lent can be more than a time to give up a favorite food or another favorite thing for a specific number of days with the expectation of taking them up again when the season ends. In more recent years, the season has taken on a wider and deeper meaning for many Christians. For those Christians, the season has become a period of introspection and self-examination during which the focus is upon simple living, discipline, penitence, and renewal with the expectation of making adaptations and permanent changes in life style that will lead to a better and more satisfying life.

Like every season, this Lenten season will pass. For some who do not observe it, the season will have little significance. For others who observe it, the season will have more significance, for it is a time for change. After inward reflection, those who observe it will exercise discipline and discard the unnecessary and cling to that which is good to make life better.

Stanford Christian Church

All of us have misplaced things at times; car keys, clothes, notes, etc. A young man lost his winter coat while away at college, and went to class "cold" for three days and then, he found his coat – on his bed. In the hurried, pressured, anxiety-filled pace we keep, sometimes our faith gets misplaced. Time for daily Bible reading, prayers, and devotions often-times get lost in the shuffle. Later – sometimes days, sometimes years – we discover that our faith hasn't been lost at all; just misplaced or replaced by other priorities we had piled on top of it. Regular worship helps us to keep our focus on our faith. We invite you to join us for worship this Sunday, at the Stanford Christian Church, 200 East Main Street (next to the Court House), at 10:50 a.m. as we focus on our faith together!

FEATURES FROM THE BIBLE
TRUTH IN SCRIPTURE
Another Promise to Abram
Genesis 15
The Lord spoke to Abram in a vision promising him protection and a great reward.
Abram complained that he had no children to inherit the blessing that God would give him. The Lord promised him as many descendants as there were stars in the sky.
Abram believed God and God counted it to him as righteousness. Although He believed, Abram asked for a sign of God fulfilling His promise.
While Abram was in a deep sleep, God told Abram about a sojourn to Egypt by his people where they would remain for 400 years and then return to the land of Canaan.
And God promised that upon their return, Abram's descendants would possess the land from the river of Egypt to the great river Euphrates.

FCC makes trouble for itself with ‘study’ of journalism

The First Amendment establishes our right to a press free from intrusion, regulation or intimidation by the government. As to a right to be free from questions by a national “news nanny,” it’s all in how you view the ultimate intent.

A few weeks ago, a Republican appointee to the Federal Communications Commission kicked up a fuss — particularly among conservative groups — about a planned FCC study of how journalists make news decisions.

Commissioner Ajit Pai wrote an Op-Ed column Feb. 10 in The Wall Street Journal saying the commission’s “Multi-Market Study of Critical Information Needs,” or CIN, meant “the agency plans to send researchers to grill reporters, editors and station owners about how they decide which stories to run,” starting with a pilot program in Columbia, S.C.

“The purpose of the CIN,” Pai wrote, “... is to ferret out information from television and radio broadcasters about ‘the process by which stories are selected’ and how often stations cover ‘critical information needs,’ along with ‘perceived station bias’ and ‘perceived responsiveness to underserved populations.’”

Noting that the FCC has the power to renew or deny broadcast licenses, Pai wrote that the voluntary study was anything but that. He wondered why the study also included newspapers, over which the FCC historically has had no authority.

As happens in today’s polarized political environment, liberal observers took a different tack, saying the study was prepared with the help of USC’s Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism, and was simply part of an ongoing FCC obligation to periodically report to Congress on how well the public gets information it needs, and what hurdles may exist to improving that process.

On Feb. 21, the FCC backed away from its plan. “Any suggestion the Commission intends to regulate the speech of news media is false,” FCC spokeswoman Shannon Gilson said. A revised study will be conducted, but journalists and news media owners will not be asked to participate.

So: An outright assault on a free press — with, as the more florid claims said, official “news monitors” in every newsroom? Or a benign bureaucratic survey that began more than two years ago, created in cooperation with the very journalists it was intended to examine?

Lest we forget, there’s nothing in the First Amendment that protects the press from questions, criticism and review, by anybody. But when government does so, it merits extra caution and concern — if not claims that that “media sky is falling.” The government’s record on good intentions and the news media can provide enough cause to worry.

Just seven years after the Bill of Rights, with its First Amendment, was adopted, Congress approved and President John Adams signed a law that provided for prosecution of editors critical of either one. Within a few years the law was allowed to expire, having lost public support after more than a dozen journalists were jailed under the pretense of inciting war with France, which some saw as a mere excuse to eliminate political opponents.

Attempts by the government to restrain the press prior to publication have, through the years, ultimately have been ruled unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court, notably in the so-called “Pentagon Papers” case in 1971 when the Nixon administration tried to prevent publication of a secret report on U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

And the FCC itself created a prime example of good intentions-gone-wrong with the history of its Fairness Doctrine, enacted in 1949. The commission was concerned then about the concentration of news outlets in a few hands, and the doctrine required broadcasters to provide information and varied views on matters of public interest.

Several decades later, it was evident virtually all electronic news outlets chose the safest path to avoid violating the doctrine: Providing no opinion. Once common “broadcast editorials” disappeared. Discarded by the FCC in 1987, the doctrine was made further obsolete by the proliferation of cable TV stations, and by the diversity of outlets and information available on the Internet — which some says makes the entire commission an anachronism and unneeded.

Still, surveys show that broadcast TV remains the largest single medium by which the public gets news — and both liberals and conservatives find reason to regularly criticize all or part of that news media. Newspapers clearly face financial hurdles — and tens of thousands of jobs in journalism have been lost in the past 20 years.

Yes, how well the news media are meeting their obligation to readers, viewers, listeners and users is a worthy subject of study — and is regularly, by non-profit organizations, private media monitoring groups and an ever-vocal host of individual critics.

Regulators doing that very studying should raise caution, if not the panic voiced by some commentators. Might not a “study of the studies” and reviews of oft-expressed criticism be more efficient and just as informative for that portion of the FCC’s examination of the news media today?

In addition to providing its critics with an easy target, the pilot FCC study also provided its own benediction: “Go forth and CIN no more.”

Wide variety of bills moving forward in Ky. Legislature

Even though we are now into March, it looks like the cold weather will continue. But surely warmer days are not too far off. Spring is especially important for our area, as we prepare for the tourists and regular visitors to enjoy our lakes.

This week, I introduced a resolution to the Senate floor this week that is very relevant to our way of life around Lake Cumberland and many areas in Kentucky. Senate Concurrent Resolution 44 declares Kentucky the Houseboat Capital of the World. Boating is a valuable economic engine of Kentucky injecting 826 million dollars annually. Fishing, vacationing, and enjoying our lakes is a tradition and part of our identity, in addition to our manufacturers of houseboats.

In other legislative news, this week Senate Bill 7 was signed by Governor Beshear. The new law will allow nurse practitioners to prescribe medication without a physician as long as they meet the requirements. Ultimately this will provide more access to medical care, especially for citizens in rural areas.

Senate Bill 118 passed this week. The bill changes statute language to allow newspaper deliverers to be contract employees, not employees of the newspapers. Newspaper carriers act as contractors as it stands, and this change allows the law to reflect what is in practice.

Senate Bill 23 will help small businesses compete. Currently, movers have to receive approval from their competitors before receiving a certificate to be able to operate. This bill changes the language so that companies seeking to operate as movers can go directly to the transportation cabinet for that certification. This allows more competition in the marketplace and helps keep prices competitive for consumers.

Senate Bill 84 also passed. It requires entities that buy cars for scrap to run the vehicle identification number and make sure no liens or delinquent taxes exist. If such exists, the business cannot accept the vehicle.

Senate Bill 118 passed and will benefit families and individuals with eye conditions. The legislation permits eye drops to be refilled more frequently and requires insurers to cover an additional bottle of prescription eye drops once every three months if needed for a child in day care or school. It is critical that children with glaucoma have access to these drops to maintain their sight and eye health.

Other Senate bills dealing were passed, with smaller impact on most Kentuckians. They addressed preventing state retirement spiking, employee classification, and “house-keeping” bills that organized governmental offices, and made certain functions more efficient.

Thank you for the opportunity to serve and for keeping in touch regarding issues of legislation. I encourage you to come to Frankfort for hearings of interest to you or to view the Senate. Citizens are always welcome in our committee meetings. If you can’t drive up, then please tune in. You can view live-streaming and archived coverage of legislative proceedings at www.ket.org.

If you have any issues or concerns, please call my office in Frankfort at 502-564-8100 or toll free at 1-800-372-7181. I appreciate your time and input.

Avoid problems of spring allergies

By James A. Turpin, M.D.

As spring arrives this year, the greening of the trees and the blooming of colorful flowers will be a welcomed relief from the bitterly cold temperatures of this winter. Yet, the beauty of spring can bring challenges to the nearly 35 million Americans who suffer from “seasonal” allergies.

You can help to ease the problems caused by your allergies with the following tips:

•Know your allergies. Your physician may have you tested to determine what is triggering your allergic symptoms.

•If you are allergic to pollen and mold, avoid the outdoors on windy days or when you begin to notice symptoms. It is also a good idea to avoid mowing your lawn or being near someone who is cutting grass if you are allergic to grass or molds.

•If you are allergic to pollen, minimize activity outdoors at dawn (5 a.m. to 10 a.m.) when pollen is usually emitted into the air.

•Keep car windows closed when you drive. Using an air conditioner at home is also a good idea.

•Avoid hanging laundry outside to dry. Pollen and molds can collect on sheets and clothes.

If you have asthma, you may find that your symptoms worsen during allergy season. Asthma is a chronic lung disease that affects more than 17 million Americans. It is characterized by inflammation of the airways, which makes the airway smaller, making it more difficult to breathe.

To help keep your allergies in check, visit your physician regularly as the continuing advice of a doctor is crucial to the long-term treatment of allergic conditions. Your physician may recommend drug therapies, allergy shots or you may be referred to a medical specialist with special training in diagnosing and treating allergic diseases.

Dr. James Turpin is medical director of Ephraim McDowell Fort Logan Hospital's Emergency Department.

Screen yourself for colorectal cancer

By Audrey Narducci, M.D.

Colorectal cancer is the third most common cancer diagnosed in men and women in the United States. Because symptoms of colorectal cancer may not appear until the disease has progressed, it's important for individuals to be screened for this cancer before symptoms appear.

Fecal occult blood testing is a common screening test that can be done in the privacy of a person's home. It can detect blood in the stool that cannot be seen by the naked eye. During March, Ephraim McDowell Health is providing free fecal occult blood testing kits from the Information Desks at its two hospitals – Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center in Danville and Ephraim McDowell Fort Logan Hospital in Stanford.

The American Cancer Society recommends that adults begin screening themselves for colorectal cancer at the age of 50. The preferred screening method is a colonoscopy, a procedure that visualizes the entire colon and allows for the removal of polyps or small cancers during the procedure. A colonoscopy is recommended every 10 years.

The American Cancer Society also recommends a flexible sigmoidoscopy, which uses a flexible tube to visualize part of the colon, every five years. The American Cancer Society also recommends a barium enema, an X-ray procedure of the entire colon that generally detects large polyps or masses although it may miss small cancers and pre-cancerous lesions, every five years.

Individuals can reduce their risks for colorectal cancer by eating a diet low in fat, consuming 25 to 30 grams of fiber daily, including leafy green vegetables and breakfast cereals in your diet and exercising at least 20 minutes three to four days a week.

Dr. Audrey Narducci is a board-certified general surgeon on the medical staff at Ephraim McDowell Fort Logan Hospital. She can be contacted at (606) 365-4600.

SNOW

From A1

Tuesday and Wednesday; county government offices operated on a two-hour delay Tuesday. Hustonville City Council canceled its regular meeting Tuesday evening.

Lincoln County Sheriff Curt Folger warned residents online Monday that snow drifts around the county could strand drivers.

Folger said deputies dealt with some vehicles running off roads, but the number of calls Monday was limited.

Multiple areas around Kentucky were reporting salt shortages Monday morning, but Lincoln County and Stanford officials said they had enough salt and weren't worried about running out just yet.

In Stanford, Mayor Bill Miracle said the city road crew had difficulty initially getting out to salt roads during sleet conditions Sunday night because the city's salt stockpile was locked up in the Lincoln County Road Department garage and no one was available to open the garage.

The city was eventually able to borrow salt from the local state highway garage, Miracle said.

The salting stopped once snow began falling in the early morning hours Monday. After the snowfall, the city road crew began scraping the roads and then switched back to salting Monday afternoon, Miracle said.

By Tuesday, main roads in Stanford were mostly clear; many sideroads and subdivision streets were still covered in a deep, icy layer of snow.

Judge-Executive Jim Adams said Lincoln County's full complement of salt trucks were dispatched to fight the winter precipitation, but due to the extremely hazardous road conditions and heavy amounts of snow, it was going to take a while for them to dig out the county's secondary and smaller roads.

"With the equipment and the manpower that they have, some of these roads probably won't get done until tomorrow," Adams said on Monday. "They're going to be a while getting to those secondary roads."

As many as three of the county's salt trucks at one time had skidded off the road and were waiting for a tow truck to pull them out, Adams said.

"Once you start toward the ditch, you're pretty much going to be there," he said.

Adams said deep snow and icy sleet were slowing the progress of county trucks and increasing the possibility of breakdowns.

"When it snows this much with the ice underneath, it just puts a lot of pressure on the equipment," he said.

While the storm may have affected Lincoln County for several days, that's nothing compared to the months of recovery that might have been necessary if the storm had dumped thick layers of ice like the infamous 2009 winter storm, Adams said.

"We were looking at another 2009 repeat and that would have been devastating again because we're not equipped and neither is anyone else," he said. "I know it's bad, but it could have been a heck of a lot worse."

Ohio painter famous for rural landscapes to visit Stanford

STANFORD — Popular Ohio woodcrafter and painter Billy Jacobs will be visiting Stanford for a signing event on Saturday.

Jacobs, who is well-known in arts communities for his paintings of rural American countrysides, is being brought to town by Carolyn Muse, the owner of the primitives store, Your Village Shoppe, in downtown Stanford.

Muse said Jacobs' art sells very well and she expects to see a large turnout for the event, which is scheduled from 12-4 p.m.

Muse said she believes this to be a first-time visit for Jacobs to the area and expects more than 100 people from around the state and even out-of-state to attend. Muse has been stocking up on Jacobs' work to make sure she doesn't run out during the event.

Jacobs made primitive art pieces in the 1980s and 1990s, before turning his attention to painting in the 2000s. After painting in acrylics for some years, Jacobs switched to watercolors and began painting the rural scenes many are now familiar with.

"Billy's artwork has taken the market by storm," a biography of Jacobs provided by his studio. "His depiction of the simple American lifestyle and days gone by bring a nostalgic comfort to the viewer."

The event will include refreshments. One canvas signed by Jacobs will be given away in a drawing.

Down 36-22 at the half, Garrard’s Jake Smith started out the third quarter with two free throws and Sebastian put up a jumper to trim the deficit to 36-26. But Taylor answered for Lincoln with two free throws and Neil Conley nailed a 3-pointer to push it back out to 41-26 with 5:31 left in the third quarter.
Three-pointers would rain throughout the third period.

B.J. Hoover bombed in two 3-pointers and Pittman scored inside off a Taylor assist for Lincoln’s largest lead of the game, 49-31, with 3:56 still to go in the third. Crutchfield kept Garrard in the game by draining three straight 3-pointers and McCollum added two free throws to make it a 52-42 ballgame with just over a minute left in the period.
“We have respect for Garrard,” Jackson said. “He’s (Dennis Bryant’s) done a really good job coaching those kids ... You’ve got to give them credit for hanging in there and battling.”

But Lincoln, which also had a hot hand from 3-point range on 12-for-25 shooting, got a triple from Dalton Godbey with 2.5 seconds left to extend the lead to 55-42 going into the fourth quarter.
The Patriots’ maintained a double-digit lead throughout the final frame. Lincoln’s lead was back at 18 points, 70-52, with 2:56 to play after a Taylor layup. McCollum and Sebastian both hit 3s late to get Garrard within 70-58.

The Golden Lions missed an opportunity to get the deficit back to 10 with 1:43 remaining only to have McCollum miss the front end of a bonus situation. Conway tallied a bucket in the closing minute and the Pats went 4-for-6 at the foul line to finish.
“They didn’t quit fighting, but I thought our kids did what we had to do. I thought we took care of the ball when we needed to, we got baskets when we needed to and we got stops when we needed to,” Jackson said. “We played well enough to take care of business and play Friday night. And our goal coming in to tonight was to win and to get to play in the region.”

Lincoln, which shot 61 percent (26-for-43) from the field, saw 3-pointers from Pittman, Conway and Taylor early in the game and two layups by Andrew Wilks and one by Pittman as the Patriots jumped ahead 15-6. Crutchfield put up a bucket and McCollum hit a 3-pointer to cut the lead to 15-11.

The Patriots owned a 10-point lead by the end of the first, closing on a 7-1 run. Conway and Hoover scored a bucket apiece then Conway grabbed a defensive rebound, brought it down the court and drained a deep 3 at the buzzer to make it 22-12.

A Pittman putback followed by a Conway 3 gave Lincoln its biggest lead of the first half, 34-18, with 2:43 to go in the second quarter. Lincoln led 36-22 at the half.

Lincoln was 12-for-21 from the free-throw line.
Garrard shot 47 percent (20-for-43) from the field and was 10-for-16 from the foul line.
Sebastian led the Golden Lions on the boards with seven rebounds. Wilks picked up seven boards for Lincoln.

DISTRICT CHAMPS

From B1

“For whatever reason, we didn’t come out ready to play,” Boyle coach Steve Adams said. “Lincoln did and they jumped out on us. I think we won every quarter except the first quarter. But you’ve got to come out ready to play in a big game and we didn’t. You’ve got to give a hand to Lincoln. They were ready to play and did a good job.”

Junior guard Jacob Conway led Lincoln in the win with a team-high 22 points on 8-for-15 shooting. Timmy Taylor scored 19 points and had seven assists and Andrew Wilks finished with 11 points and nine rebounds.

All three got in the score-book in Lincoln’s opening run. Conway, who had nine points in the run, got the Patriots off to a 5-0 start with a layup followed by a 3-pointer. Taylor pushed through eight points, including two 3s, and Wilks added a bucket. Neil Conley also drained a trey and Kody Cornelius, who had four points in the run, closed the first with a basket to make it 26-10.

Hagen Tyler, who had a game-high 27 points on 10-for-18 shooting and grabbed nine rebounds, provided over half of Boyle’s scoring in the first quarter off a 3-pointer and a three-point play.

Baskets by Wilks and Brandon Pittman gave Lincoln its biggest lead of the game, 30-13, with 5:53 left in the first half.

But Boyle wouldn’t allow Lincoln any more cushion. Josiah Robbins, who finished with 16 points, connected for a two-point goal and a 3-pointer as the Rebels broke on a 9-2 scoring tear. Tyler added a bucket in the run and Chapman Bean sank two free throws to make it 32-22 with 2:37 on the clock. Then, with 1:03 showing, Tyler cut the deficit to single digits, 34-25, by drilling a 3-pointer.

Lincoln would take a double-digit lead into the break, however, with Conway nailing his own 3-pointer with 5.7 seconds left to give the Patriots a 37-25 halftime advantage.

Conway opened the third quarter with his third 3-pointer of the night to give Lincoln its largest lead of the second half, 40-25. The Patriots maintained a double-digit lead up until the 1:56 mark of the third quarter when Tyler hit inside to make it 46-38.

But Lincoln’s Taylor would answer last in the period, driving in for a layup and a 48-38 lead going into the final frame.

The Rebels continued to challenge the Patriot lead in the fourth quarter, cutting it to single digits six different times. Boyle got as close as 56-49 with 2:53 to play after two Tyler free throws and a Robbins foul shot only to have Lincoln answer with a 5-0 run to help put the game away.

“We cut into their lead and then we rushed,” Adams said. “We had a couple stops and missed a couple shots and didn’t get a rebound. You don’t take care of business early, you don’t get rewarded late. And that’s what happened to us tonight.”

“I’m pleased with our effort, we kept battling. I’m very proud of them for that. We’ve just got to start the game better.”

Despite Lincoln’s early double-digit lead, Jackson said he was always aware of what Boyle could bring to the floor.

“Good teams make good runs and they’ve got a good team,” he said. “We told them (Patriots) at halftime that they would make runs and they did. They made two or three different runs and we were able to withstand it. I’m really proud of our kids. We kept our focus. We handled the pressure pretty well and got the ball to the right people where we could score.”

The Lincoln boys had not won a district title since 2009, going into regionals the past four years as district runners-up. But the title is now Lincoln’s once again.

“All we’ve done all year is say, ‘the next game’s the big game.’ And we’ve maintained that approach. So tonight was a huge game for us and we’re happy to get the district championship to Lincoln County, for our school, our community and our kids,” said Jackson. “I’m really, really proud of them for hanging together and getting this tonight. It’s long overdue.”

Lincoln was 6-for-19 from 3-point range and 10-for-15 at the foul line. Boyle was 7-for-20 from 3 and 11-for-16 at the line.

Boyle edged out Lincoln on the boards 27-26. Elkins got seven rebounds for Boyle. Pittman had seven boards for Lincoln.

FARM FACTS

By Dan Grigson
Lincoln County Extension Office

Hay and pasture notes

The weather has been terrible the last few weeks, so not much farm work has been done. I want to give you some reminders this week for some chores that really need to be done on most livestock and forage farms, as soon as possible. Hopefully the weather will cooperate better in the next couple of weeks.

Sowing Clover:

You still have time to overseed, but in the next 10 days, fescue will start to grow quickly so from March 10 on, you need to do some tillage before seeding. You can have good clover renovation success by disking up 60 percent of the sod, broadcasting the seed and then cultipacking. This is the old way, but still a great way to add clover to your hay and pasture fields. The other options is to plant with a no-till seeder. No-tilling without a herbicide works less than 50 percent of the time, due to the quick grass growth in March, choking out the clover. Spend the extra dollars to do it right and you will be happy with the good stands. There are plenty of drills around to rent. With no-till plantings and using the herbicide you can plant clover through mid April. Be sure not to plant too deep. You want to seed no more than ½ inch deep. Get off the tractor and check the depth. It's very easy to plant seed too deep with a no-till drill, thus reducing your stand. But again let me tell you, you still have about 10 days to broadcast overseed. It looks like this will be a good week to overseed.

Sowing Alfalfa:

It is now time to prepare for alfalfa seeding. The ideal time for conventional tillage spring seeding is March 10-April 2. For no-till seeding, it is best to let the soil warm up a little, so I suggest the last week of March to April 15. This reduces seed laying in cold wet soils which can cause the seed to rot or to germinate and be a weak seedling. No-till seedings work well, but takes a little more extra care and management on your part. It is a must to use a burn-down herbicide when no-tilling alfalfa.

Alfalfa Weevils:

Mid March is the time of year to start inspecting your alfalfa fields for weevils. Check your fields every three to five days for damage. Don't just eyeball, but break off some stems and shake them in a bucket to see if weevils are there. A few warm days and alfalfa will kick into gear. That sunshine will wake up the weevils also. Keep an eye on your alfalfa and don't let weevils cut your yields.

Hay & Pasture Field Fertilization:

It would be best to apply fertilizer by a soil test, but without one, I would suggest the following for annual topdressing of alfalfa/grass-150 pounds of DAP per acre and 200 pounds of muriate of potash per acre and boron; for clover/grass-100 pounds of DAP and 100 pounds of muriate of potash per acre; for grass only fields 100 pounds of urea, 100 pounds of 60 percent potash and 75 pounds of DAP per acre. When should you apply this fertilizer? To increase yields mid February to March 1 is always best for grass field and grass clover field fertilization. For alfalfa-grass fields we suggest that you wait until after the first cutting.

Speeding Soil Sample Results:

The next day it's too wet to plow or do other farm jobs, get your soil samples taken and bring them to the Extension Office for analysis. We can test your soil for all major and minor nutrients. Our U.K. testing system allows us to get your results back to the office in seven to 10 working days. I will then write you recommendations for only what you need for the best economic value, so you don't base your fertilizer use on a guess. We will charge the sample cost to your fertilizer dealer. If your dealer takes your soil samples, be sure to tell them to send them through our U.K. Extension Office. If you want to pay for your own, the cost is only $5 per field you sample.

For more information on these or any agricultural topics, contact me Dan Grigson at the U.K. Extension Office, 104 Metker Trail in Stanford, 365-2447.

Lincoln County property among acreage donated to PACE

The PACE (Purchase of Agricultural Conservation Easements) Corp. received donations of six properties in Kentucky last year totaling nearly 565 acres.

Five of the donated properties came from Logan County and one from Lincoln County covering 564.691 acres.

"I want to personally thank these Kentucky landowners for ensuring that their land remains in agricultural production," Agriculture Commissioner James Comer said. "Farming is necessary to feed a growing population, but it also contributes nearly $6 billion a year in cash receipts to Kentucky's famers."

PACE currently has 171 conservation easements in 31 Kentucky counties totaling 33,818.38 acres.

The Kentucky General Assembly established the PACE in 1994 to purchase agricultural conservation easements in order to ensure that lands currently in agricultural use will not be converted to other uses. Although PACE was established to purchase easements, landowners also are encouraged to donate easements to ensure they remain agricultural in nature.

For more information about PACE, including an application, go to the Kentucky Department of Agriculture's website at www.kyagr.com, go to Promotional Programs, and click on Farmland Preservation/PACE.

Financial Aid Tip of the Month:

Tips about student loans

Many students find that they must use loans to help pay for a higher education, especially if they're working on a four-year degree. These tips from the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA) may help lessen the impact of borrowing.

- If you haven't already done so, submit the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). You may not think you'll qualify for federal aid, but the only way to find out is to apply.
- Find all the sources of financial aid that don't have to be paid back first – grants, scholarships and work-study – before turning to loans.
- Borrow only what you need. Remember, you have to repay your loan. If the school's financial aid package awards you $5,000 in federal loans but you only need $3,000, just borrow the $3,000.

- Use federal student loans first. You'll generally have more repayment options when it's time to start making payments.
- If you can, pay the interest on Federal Unsubsidized Loans while you're in school. Otherwise, the interest will be added to your principal and you'll end up paying more.
- If you need a private loan, do some research to find the one that best fits your situation.

KHEAA is the state agency that administers Kentucky's student financial aid programs, including the Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES).

To find links to other useful education websites, go to www.gotocollege.ky.gov. For more information about Kentucky scholarships and grants, visit www.kheaa.com; write KHEAA, P.O. Box 798, Frankfort, KY 40602; or call 800-928-8926, ext. 6-7372.

General physicians can take care of treating most infections, but sometimes the specialized expertise of an infectious disease specialist is needed to diagnose or manage specific infectious diseases.

Dr. Maskey, an Internal Medicine board-certified physician, earned her medical degree from Chittagong Medical College in Chittagong, Bangladesh. She completed her residency in Internal Medicine and a fellowship in infectious disease at SUNY Upstate Medical University in Syracuse, New York. She has a special interest in bone and joint infections, HIV medicine and general infectious disease.

Dr. Maskey brings with her a vast amount of experience including serving as an Assistant Professor in infectious disease at the University of Kentucky. She has also worked in research related to Streptococcus pneumoniae infection in the pediatric population in Nepal. Dr. Maskey is from Nepal and now lives in Lexington with her husband Ashish, who is an Interventional Pulmonologist. She enjoys reading books and spending time with her husband and their two children when she is not working.

Free screening kits available during Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month

Colon cancer is a preventable disease, but it is the third leading cancer killer in the United States. It doesn't have to be! Nine out of 10 colon cancer cases may be prevented or cured with regular screenings.

Ephraim McDowell Health Community Services, with the support of the Ephraim McDowell Health Care Foundation, is working to raise awareness that regular screenings can detect cancer in its early stages, when it is the most treatable.

Ephraim McDowell Health will offer free, take-home colon cancer screening kits in March, which is observed as National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month. The screening kits are available for anyone over the age of 50 who has not had a screening in the last 12 months. The kits may be picked up between March 9 and March 23 at any of the following locations during normal business hours.
